ABOUT DR. TONY ROSEN

Dr. Tony Rosen is a researcher in elder abuse and geriatric injury prevention at Weill Cornell Medical College and a practicing Emergency Physician at New York-Presbyterian Hospital.

His research focuses on improving the identification, intervention, and prevention of elder abuse in the emergency department and other health care settings. He has studied forensic injury patterns in physical elder abuse and clinically detectable differences between unintentional injuries and those caused by abuse.

His honors include a 2014 GEMSSTAR R03 from the National Institute on Aging and a J. Henger Career Development Award; a 2016 Paul B. Beeson Emerging Leaders in Aging Career Development Award (K76); and a recent R01 from the National Institute on Aging studying health care utilization among elder abuse victims using Medicare claims data and machine learning to support earlier identification.
